The principles followed while arriving at the recommendations are as follows:

1. If the focus of the question is on a particular point is without ambiguity and there is unambiguous answer, objections on the way the question is framed by raising debate on details which are not relevant to the question and its answer are not entertained
2. In case there is inconsistency in certain words of a question but when the question and answers are read together, any reasonable person can arrive at the answer without difficulty, objections on the words are not entertained.
3. If a the question is correctly framed in both versions but the correct answer is not available in Telugu due to error in a word, any reasonable person would look to the English version which is authentic as well as adjascent and find out that word which enables him to arrive at the correct answer in Telugu. In such case, objections based on inconsistency in Telugu version are not

4. If a question is correct in English and Telugu and correct option is available in both versions but the option sequence is different, there is no occasion for the candidate referring to Telugu version to refer to the English version while arriving at an answer. Therefore, multiple options are allowed for such question.
