79840726983	How much water a dripping tap is likely to waste in a year (choose nearest figure)?	4	0	20000 litres is correct answer. However, the claim is greatly exaggerated. If we presume, 10 drips of water a minute, after a day it will add up to 14,400 drips, which is equivalent to about 3 litres; after a week it will be 21 litres, after a month will be 90 litres and in a year about 1080 litres, which is more practical. For 20000 litres, it would be a flowing tap and not a dripping tap. In the Indian context, the figure is given as 1200 litres in "Resources and Development" – Geography, 8th Class NCERT p 15.
